

Little did I know that Thursday night in our OverComer meeting, that I was being prepared for the events that would transpire the very next day...

As I was preparing to teach at our meeting Thursday night, I felt a strong impression to not only teach on the subject of fear but to also look up many scriptures on the subject (33 places in The Bible to be exact).

When I was wrapping up the lesson on fear, a "thought" came to my mind that I wrestled with for a minute. The "thought", pull up a chair, sit down and simply read the 33 passages in scripture I had found concerning fear. I wrestled with the "thought" because I was thinking "just reading all those passages will take several minutes, bore the class and lose their attention". But... I finally did just that, I sat down and told the class I was going to read the words of The Lord about fear to them and listen as though it was me reading it to them but as The Lord himself speaking it directly to them. So that's what I did...

Now fast forward to the next day, Friday... The wife and I, along with our youngest, are sitting on the couch watching a funny show and Toya gets a phone call... She jumps up and with panic and fear in her voice and face says "we gotta go! Nakia and her friends were just in a wreck!!!" Her and I got in the car and started heading to the scene of the accident which was about a 15 minute ride. After about a 3 minutes driving to the wreck, I asked LaToya "What did NaKia say". LaToya said "It wasn't Nakia that called, it was Kayleigh". I told her to call back and see if she was ok so she called back and all I could hear was crying and pain. At that point, I guess you could say, I picked up the pace to the scene...

When we arrived, Toya was trying to get out of the car before I could get to a complete stop. The car, as you can see in the picture, was destroyed. Nakia and her friends were out of the car walking towards the ambulance and Nakia had her face covered by her hands crying and blood seemed to be everywhere.

To shorten the account up some I will skip to different parts of the next couple of days.

The ride to the hospital was rough. We didn't know how bad anyone was hurt. FEAR had almost overtaken us. The ambulance got to the hospital a couple minutes after we did. Nakia is not a minor so we were not allowed to go back and see her.. Fear of the unknown condition of our daughter was on the scene... LaToya was getting, shall I say, a little loud and thuggish, in the ER waiting room and I had to remind her who she was in Christ.

Our youngest, that we had left at home, was just getting sick and we couldn't leave him alone for long so I left the hospital and went home to be with him.

My wife called about the time I got home and said they let her in to go see our daughter and they had just taken her back to do a scan on her head..... A few minutes later, she called back with news that took my breath.. "The scan showed that Nakia has several broken bones in her face and that her brain was bleeding. They are prepping her now to transport her to the Trauma center. They won't let me ride with her so you have to come now!" Frantically I was making calls to our friends to see if I could drop Jayden off with them while I go to the hospital. Our 2nd oldest plays in the band and was at a football game and would have to be picked up after the game as well... We are blessed to have friends that not only allowed me to drop our youngest off but also said they would take care of getting Jeff as well.

After I dropped Jayden off and I was driving to pick up my wife, I began to "lose it". Let me remind you that I am saved, sanctified, filled with The Holy Ghost and Fire but also have PTSD as a result of having 2 daughters that I carried into hospitals and walked out with empty arms with both of them... Fear was overtaken my mind. On the ride to the hospital, I called my Pastor to let him know what was going on with Nakia and with myself... HE talked to me and then prayed for me...

I pick LaToya up and we head to the Trauma center... When we arrive, we are told she just got there and they were settling her in and to take a seat and they would get back to us. In a few minutes, they called us up and the gentleman looked at us and said typically only 1 person could go back to see her (his eyes told us he had pity on us due to the information he had received about her condition) but he allowed us both to go back to see her.

There was only 1 room left empty when Nakia got there so she got that room. We went back to see her and our baby girl's face looked horrible.

A little after midnight, being there was only 1 chair in the room and I had to pick up my son the next morning, I headed back home.

The terrible combination of fear and my PTSD was terrible to say the least.

The next morning, LaToya called and said they had done another scan and that there was still bleeding on her brain BUT the only thing that was broken now was her nose. (Hmmm).

The whole time I was getting dressed and part of the drive to the Trauma center, I would like to say I had been thinking about it but I would be lying if I did, rather The Holy Spirit kept reminding me of the class I taught Thursday night and the scriptures from the 33 different passages I sat and read to the class about what God said about fear and how He responds to our fear and what He was in times of our fear... WOW!!!!

To wrap this account up for you... The accident was Friday evening, we got to bring Nakia home last night (Sunday). She has a traumatic brain injury and has to have someone with her for the next 2 weeks as well as multiple Drs appointments BUT... GOD is faithful!!!

I have seen the hand of God work these last few days. HE has worked by using people and by bringing peace and comfort. I have also been reminded that God will bless and prepare us in advance for the broken times, the stressful, fearful, PTSD, anxious, depressed, temptation times that we ALL go through IF we will allow HIM and just simply pay attention to what He and His Word says...

My daughter COULD have Died... But God!!! I could have fallen back deep into the dark hole of PTSD... But God!!!

I am putting a link in this post for you to refer back to containing those same verses on Fear so that whenever that time comes for you, and it will... You can see what God says personally to you, during that time.

Continue to keep our daughter in your prayers for a full, speedy recovery.
